One would hardly think that useful knowledge and a generous desire for information would be misdirected, yet, such has happened here. A recent visitor left lying around a copy of a Travel Magazine. This evidently was brought to the knowledge of a male slave whom we possess, and the stories of other lands and other scenes fired him with the desire for exploration. After carefully going over all this farm he extended his expeditions to the neighbors. As he was inclined to turn over some of the crop in his thirst for knowledge and love of investigation we were afraid his desire for research might not be appreciated by them, and they and their dogs might do him a mischief so we located him in a log cabin with a spacious yard. The confinement worried him but the fence didn't and he hopped out. Thus it stands at present: he hops out, we put him in again, and add a few rails to the fence, repeat daily for four or five weeks. Result, the "Flying pig" isn't in it with our fellow. He is fast developing into an A.I. Aviator who can maneuver without an airplane. We are thinking of sending him to the States. He will probably go there in a barrel marked No. 1 Mess Pork. In the mean time we are afraid the Almighty may happen to see the fence and think we have started a new Tower Babel.

Czechoslovak Express Appreciation to Britain.

Washington, Aug. 28—Appreciation of the aid rendered the Czechoslovaks by the British government in according them recognition as a nation and the work of Prof. Thomas G. Masaryk and the members of the Czechoslovak national council, has been received in a cable from the Czechoslovaks on the Volga river. The cablegram signed by four commanders of the army follows:

"In the name of the Czechoslovak army which today by its efforts on the immense front stretching from the Volga to the Pacific, is contributing to the common victory in the fight against Austro-German coalition, we ask you to convey to the government of Great Britain our sincere thanks for its declaration.

"At the same time, dear brothers, we express to you our heartfelt thanks of the Czechoslovaks for your great work which has just been crowned with success and for your noble efforts in favor of our independence. It is not necessary to assure that the Czechoslovak army in Russia will fight under your direction to the end to complete victory."

According to an entente diplomatist the German government hopes for an early peace so as to begin preparations for another world war. If we are mistaken this will be the last world war in which Germany will appear in the role of aggressor. When the Allies are through with the Kaiser's armies his own people will take care of him and his junkies.

Premier Borden and Imperialism

(The Albertan)

The arrival of the last British mail containing comments and news in the British press on the recent speeches of Sir Robert Borden, effectively clears up matters which have puzzled the Canadian public for several weeks past. The British papers and the statement of the premier to the Canadian press yesterday, definitely establish the fact that Sir Robert Borden has kept him self out of the domestic politics of Great Britain, and that this country is in effect ranged on the side of a league of nations' solution of the war, the basis of which must be an economic peace.

The significance of Sir Robert's vague declaration respecting "complete freedom of action in Canada, in co-operation with other parts of the empire" has not yet been fully realized in Canada because of the unfortunate circumstances that we have had no information as to what this referred to. The phrase itself might mean anything when read apart from its context of current political happenings in Britain, and it was in this detached and meaningless form that Sir Robert's speech was first reported in this country and that he spoke to the Canadian press as yesterday. Habitual vagueness of expression is one of the premier's failings as a public man, but in home affairs a hiatus in his pronouncements causes little serious difficulty because the public is familiar with all phases of the questions under discussion, and his supporters are at hand to interpret his generalities. In British affairs we have no such detailed knowledge of the situation, and cannot instinctively sense his meaning, and we are bewildered and puzzled by his vagueness and by his omission of a few clarifying sentences at a critical moment.

To realize full the significance of Sir Robert's statement of July 31st respecting Imperial preference, account must be taken of a fact set forth in the London papers, to which we here in Canada have given only cursory attention, viz., that for two months the Australian prime minister Mr. Hughes who was in England nominally as a member of the Imperial conference, had been conducting a whirlwind campaign with the object of stampeding Britain into tariff reform and economic war after the cessation of the hostilities. In this cause he had been flagrantly exploited by the Harmsworth press and had got so far that he had actually insulting English politicians by branding them as pro-German because their views happened to be those which he had abandoned. As the London News remarks it was "difficult to deal faithfully with Mr. Hughes in England without seeming to be discourteous to Australia," although there was reasonable assurance that Mr. Hughes was doing a gross injustice to Australia in thus representing the commonwealth as desirous of dictating to Britain. The speech of Robert Borden, therefore came at a critical moment, and his emphatic reassertion of the doctrine of non-interference of the Dominions in the fiscal policy of Britain, and his definite repudiation in the name of the Canadian people of any desire for Imperial preference at the expense of the people of the United Kingdom, had the effect of a thundering repudiation of the Hughes propaganda in England, however tame and evasive it may have sounded at home.

But he did more than this. Mr. Bonar Law and Mr. Walter Long had made declarations as to the government policy of Imperial preference in such a way that the plain man reasonably assumed that matter had been discussed by the Imperial conference. Sir Robert by promptly announcing that the subject of preference had not been before the Imperial war conference and that his recent declarations "based from the British government only as a statement of the domestic policy of the United Kingdom," reduced the whole discussion of Imperial preference to its true dimension as a phase of the political strategy of the British tariff party. Thus, what seemed tame and namby-pamby declaration at home, was a clear and unequivocal declaration, and was so interpreted in England. Timed as it was it had a direct bearing on the large issue of the League of Nations and was widely interpreted overseas as an indication of the temper of the Canadian people in this war and its solution.

In the light of all this we can now read correctly the full meaning of Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper's caustic criticism of the premier and his description of his London speech as "namby-pamby. The namby-pambyness" consisted only in the premier's refusal to be stampeded by the trade war propaganda of Hughes and the Northcliffe press and then were the Jewish adjectives of the nettled and fretful exponent of aristocratic Imperialism in Canada, disgusted that the sentiments of the mass of Canadian people had been thus clearly revealed in Britain at a serious moment.

The only feature of the situation to be criticized is the failure of Sir Robert and the Canadian press correspondents to make us at home aware of meaning of the speech, and of the failure of the premier to speak more freely Saturday, when he should have realized the local misconceptions which were largely responsible for the storm of criticism of his absence. We have plenty of Northcliffe propaganda coming over the wires, and columns of eulogistic puff from the Canadian editors about shipyards and the fleet by moonlight and gold plated banquets; but so little real news that when our premier makes a declaration affecting our Imperial relations, we have no notion with which to connect it, and have to flounder in puzzled bewilderment for a month, during which feeling boils and sizzles and unconformed criticism hardens into definite public opinion.

About the Sabbath

Editor of the Globe:

Kindly allow me to correct as far as I can any wrong impression that your readers may have obtained from the letter of Rev. H. Young of Moringside published in your issue of August 14th, 1918.

The article is entitled "The True Sabbath." Reverend Young implies that the Seventh-Day Adventists have no Bible authority for the observance of the seventh day of the week as the Christian sabbath in the New Testament dispensation, and that the observance of Sunday, the first day of the week, is fully justified by the wording of the fourth commandment of the Decalogue.

Seventh-day Adventists like other professed Christian bodies, regard the Bible as their guide book and are trying to do their part in uplifting humanity from the misery and degradation resulting from sin. We have no condemnation of the motives of our good neighbors who keep Sunday, or who have other church practices contrary to ours. We claim no monopoly of honesty and we make no claim that membership of the Seventh day Adventists Church insures salvation. We distribute Bibles. (We do not publish Bibles) We teach the Bible exactly as we understand it. We do not compel anyone to accept our view or to join our church, but if they join our church they are required to observe the seventh day of the week as a day of rest, do not know what Brother Young means by his quotation "The Letter Kill, but the spirit giveth life." Surely not that the spirit of the commandment is different from what it plainly says. He challenges us to cite any chapter or verse that says that the sabbath of the Decalogue is the seventh day of the week. He says all that is required is one day of rest following six days of labor, and the observance of the first day of the week fulfills the command. If God's command is so indefinite, then he will surely admit that Seventh-day Adventists observe one day after six days of labor, and first-day observers have no right to ask them to observe a particular day if the Lord has left it so indefinite. We agree with Brother Young that the great institution of the Sabbath stands unchanged forever. But we cannot agree with him when he says that the week and the numbering of its days has been or can be changed. The names of the days of the week have been changed and are of comparatively modern origin. Sunday was formerly connected with heathen worship and was never identified with the fourth commandment by any writer for centuries after beginning of the Christian Era. The week of seven days depends for its origin upon the Bible history of creation and the institution of the Sabbath. The Bible Sabbath is the seventh or last day of the week and every time the seventh day is mentioned in the Bible it is the seventh day of the week unless it is stated that it is the seventh day of a feast or season. There is no such thing as an eighth day of a week although there is an eighth day of a feast or of any period, having in it eight days or more. Numbers 31:24 to which Brother Young refers speaks of the seventh day of the period of purification.

Brother Young seems to have great contempt for the evidence of the calendar in use at present all over the world. No changes in the calendar have in any way affected the order of the days of the week. Unfortunately, for Brother Young's contention, the order of the days of the week and its identity with the order in Christ's day is attested by three competent witnesses who have no selfish motive for telling the same story. First, the intellectual civilized world accepts without question the order shown by the calendar. Second, the Jews scattered all over the world have continuously adhered to the ancient Sabbath of Israel and they everywhere agree that the seventh day of the former dispensation now falls upon the day commonly called Saturday. Third, the Christian Church in most of its branches commemorates the crucifixion on Good Friday and the resurrection on Easter Sunday. Luke 23:54 says that Christ died on the preparation day, or the day before the Sabbath, and that as soon as his body was placed in the tomb, the disciples rested the Sabbath day, according to the commandment. But, the day between Friday and Sunday is the day called Saturday, which our calendar also identifies as the seventh day of the week. If Brother Young should succeed in getting the world to change the calendar, he would then have to change the new Testament to harmonize with his new calendar. He admits that the first day of the week is only mentioned directly eight times in the New Testament. He thinks it is very significant that "in every single case where this reference is not to the resurrection it is to the assembling of the Christians, or to some part of worship, giving, preaching or breaking of bread. As six of the eight references to the first day of the week refer specifically to the resurrection, we will only examine every single one of the remaining two. One is Acts 20:7. Paul certainly preached on that occasion all night. The meeting is apparently mentioned because one of his congregation went to sleep and fell out of the window and Paul raised him from the ground. The context gives no comfort to the theory of first day Sabbath observance. It appears that Paul arrived in Troas on the first day of the week, but found no meeting of the church arranged, so he waited seven days and after the regular Sabbath services, remained for an evening meeting Saturday night. On Sunday morning, he continued his journey on foot. It was Paul's custom to preach every Sabbath in the synagogue or elsewhere and that both Jews and Gentiles attended his Sabbath services. (See Acts 13: 42-44; Acts 16:13; Acts 17:2; Acts 18:4.) The Gentile converts in Paul's day followed the practice of the church of Judea. See 1 Thess. 2:14. 1 Cor. 16:2 speaks of a casting up of accounts at home on that day. The regular church history testifies that the early church continued the observance of the Sabbath without any controversy with the Jews on that point for over half a century after the resurrection. On what authority was the custom of resting on the resurrection day later introduced is the question for Brother Young to satisfactorily settle. Seventh-day Adventists will thankfully study any texts of Scripture on the subject, but until Scripture evidence for the change is presented, they accept no responsibility for any uncomfortable feelings or twinges of conscience that their observances of the seventh day of the week may cause. We have no apology to offer for reading the Bible to the people and exhorting them to obey what is written. We issue an annual report of the work we are doing in the mission fields and present it to every contributor of 10 cents or more so that they may know exactly what is being done with the mission money and can judge for themselves as to whether they want to continue to encourage the mission work we are doing in foreign lands.

C. F. McVagh,
President of Western Canadian Union of Seventh-day Adventists.

Dunlop and Auto History

¶ Practically speaking the automobile has been in existence in Canada only since 1903.

¶ Years before that we made hundreds of thousands of tires for the bicycle.

¶ And since that time we have made hundreds of thousands of tires for the automobile, until the manufacture of Dunlop Auto Tires—"Traction," "Special," "Plain"—has become a big industry in itself. To you it is as important that Dunlop preceded the automobile as it is that Dunlop grew with it—became an every-day factor in this new utility of the nation.

¶ The automobile knows no better running mate—than Dunlop Tires.

Moral Reform Work

If a farmer takes a chance and puts up hay on Sunday the Moral Reform League immediately takes action to have this terrible act punished. If some poor unfortunate girl drifts into town, the police are immediately put on her trail and she is hounded out of the community. If some restaurateur keeps a little side which has become "hot", and is a little over 2 per cent mark, he is hauled into court and fined anywhere up to $100 and costs. And this may appear all right to some.

But there is work for the League outside of these pleasure cases. Right here in Lacombe, in plain sight of all our citizens, and known to all of them, cases of grossest immorality are allowed. Cases where men are living with and prostituting young women have been known to our citizens for years. Our citizens, and probably the members of the Moral Reform League, know of cases

Canadian Casualties in Big Battle Very Light

With the Canadian Forces, Aug. 27—Our casualties during the day at the battle of Arras were light being less than the total number of our prisoners. This was especially so on our right, where the chief obstacle was overcome by a turning movement. Neville Vitasse thus falling into our hands with practically no loss. On our left the valley of the Scarpe and the formidable position of Monchy-le-Preux took a larger toll. Casualties on the opening day were light precisely because the whole was a complete surprise. Captured German documents indicate that an attack in this sector might be anticipated and then follow the usual warnings to commanders for vigilance and tenacity. But the enemy has lost his keenness by successive blows. His intelligence service for the moment at least seems to have broken down. It is likewise impossible to imagine tired troops and thinned ranks with the spirit of die in the last ditch. On the other hand, every veteran of the Canadian force is possessed with the ideas of its invincibility and glows with pride when he sees the beloved force is honored by being employed as picked shock troops, and thus as he goes over the top, he is certain beforehand of success because he knows the enemy cannot any longer put into the field units capable of resisting him. He pities even the strapping prisoners, untimely drawn from their gymnasiums. With sure feet he goes from victory to victory. All this makes for light casualties. Thereafter the enemy's resistance stiffens. He gathers his reserves and concentrates the artillery, though to do so must expose himself on another part of the crumbling front.

Casualties among the stretcher bearers evacuating the wounded from our centre and right were disproportionately heavy because the enemy was able to bring to bear a heavier artillery fire over the captured ground from his artillery position north of the Scarpe. The Canadian ambulances carried on with complete disregard to its own losses. The true soldier spirit animates these alleged non-combatant services. Take the army service corps. The modern army fights on petrol, which means thousands and thousands of lorries to bring up munitions, rations and all the needs of the fighting line and to each man a driver and a spare man to carry on if the driver becomes casualty. It is not easy getting around a muddy battle field. The too conspicuous motor car is taboo, but the lorries are everywhere. The fare is nothing and the transfer privilege unlimited. Stealing rides on this particular lorry were several men going eagerly forward to fill a gap in the ranks. Suddenly a shell burst to the left and another to the right. The Tommies tumbled off the Lorry. The driver looked behind at them trudging along in the mud.

"This here lorry is loaded with ammunition and when the shells begin to fall those blokes got off in a hurry," he explained a trifle bitterly. "Maybe that lot was married men and if their number was up they wanted the missus to get a bit more of them than a trouser button, which is about all they'd have to show if the old hooker went up."

There is an incident illustrating the spirit of the Canadian force. When they came into this debatable sector, instead of issuing orders for the evacuation of the civilian population, the Canadian force issued orders for the disposition of the civilian population in the territories about to be recaptured.

Russian Writer Suggests Alliance With Russia.

Copenhagen, Aug. 28—Revision of the Brest-Litovsk peace treaty, which shall secure for Germany an alliance with Russia and the Asiatic block attached to Russia is advocated by Geo. Bernhard, political writer in the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin. After declaring that all German offers of peace have been rejected by Great Britain, the writer says:

"Their acceptance can be counted on only if England's position on the political chess board is rendered such that there is no course for her but that of acceptance. The vital idea of the new German policy must hence be directed to ward the creation of a group of powers which will have a word to say concerning English efforts either to carry on the war or at the peace conference, or at least in the matter of conducting economic warfare. No German longer denies that the Brest-Litovsk treaty of peace is the chief obstacle to the formation of such a group."

Bernhard admits that the treaty cannot be annulled, but he lays stress on the view recently outlined by Dr. Solf, the German minister for colonies, that the treaty is only a frame to be filled in the future, and adds: "The originally planned community of interests of the border states with Germany is of subsidiary importance compared with the absolutely necessary relationship between Germany and Russia and the Asiatic Block attached to Russia. . . . Instead of creating new kingdoms at this critical time we should concern ourselves with the laying of the foundation for a European alliance of nations without which the league of nations of the entire world which have been advocated by many would be nothing but a deceptive label for Anglo-Saxon world domination."

Bernhard says that the original idea of the treaty was that concessions could be made in exchange for concessions from England, but that as it is now clear there is no outlook for peace by agreement these concessions should be made to Russia.

Certainly Germany cannot expect to escape a war against her cities. The only chance to escape that fate would be complete capitulation to the terms of the Allies.

No Sugar in Tea if You Call For Pie or Dessert.

The new sugar regulations of the Canada Food Board out down the consumption of sugar 60 per cent of what was used during the past year. It states that not more than two pounds may be used for the serving of ninety meals, which is to include that used for cooking as well as sweetening.

The usual lump of sugar weighs one sixth of an ounce. The usual teaspoonful weighs one third of an ounce. Figuring two pounds for every ninety meals, will mean that public eating places will not serve more than one lump of sugar for the sweetening of the beverage, and sweet drinks, will be cut down to less than one teaspoonful, say local restaurant men.

Ninety meals to be covered by two pounds means less than one third of an ounce may be used per meal. A piece of pie, dish of porridge, fresh fruit, puddings or any dessert requires fully a third of an ounce, so that it will be seen that a desert is eaten, no sugar may be expected served with the beverage.

The new order will call for drastic changes on the part of local public house owners.

The new regulations allocating the amount of sugar used in the public eating places are going to prove especially severe to those affected with the sweet tooth.

The Canada Food Board finds that the extreme shortage of sugar makes it compulsory to take this drastic action, in order to assure a good supply for the fighting men. The United States has already put into effect a new regulation. The new order here goes into effect after Sept. 1st.

It is understood that the United States controls the entire sugar market this year, having bought up every available pound throughout the world. It is they who are allotting to each country the quantity which is considered necessary for the upkeep of armed forces. After each country receives this quota the balance goes to civilian consumption.

Each government is attempting to regulate the daily rations in such a way so as to prevent entire depletion of the supply. It is necessary that the human body have sugar in order to keep the blood in normal condition, and to permit sugar supply to become entirely exhausted would work and extreme hardship.

The next move of the food board is to control the sale of sugar to private homes. This is expected to occur within the next thirty days or soon after the public eating places have been put under proper control.

Sugar purchase certificates have already been supplied to most of the public places, which include stores of all kinds. Refiners, brokers, wholesale and retail dealers, are prohibited from selling or delivering sugar to any person for the manufacture of any product or to any person or firm using sugar for commercial purposes, including hotels, restaurants, ice cream parlors, soda fountains, etc. without first having signed this certificate, and must not sell any amount greater than which in addition to the total used by such person from the date given in this certificate and in stock will make an equal amount to the allocation as set forth. Each purchase must be received and signed for at the time of purchase on the reverse side of the certificate.

Retail dealers are prohibited from the making of sales of sugar to the manufacturers unless special written permission has been granted by the food board.

The following bulletin which speaks for itself, was received today by the local restaurant owners.

August 7 1918.
To public Eating House Licensees.
In allocating the amount of sugar to be used in the public eating place which you operate, the allocation has been made in accordance with the following regulation of the Canada Food Board.

"On and after the first day of September and until further notice the amount of sugar to be used in a public eating place shall not exceed two pounds for every ninety meals served (for all purposes including the sweetening of beverages and cooking), and the allotment of sugar to public eating places shall be not more than 60 per cent of the average monthly quantity of sugar used during the year ending December 31st 1917. Provided however, that if the allotment given does not equal 2 pounds per ninety meals served, the licensee may make written application for a further allotment."

You will please take notice that you must not use more than two pounds of sugar for every ninety meals served and that your purchase of sugar should not exceed this amount. You are requested to carefully observe this regulation and to be prepared to substantiate any request for further allotments of sugar by supplying a sworn statement of the number of meals served. Your attention is directed to the definition of the word "meal" in order No. 46, clause D, section 1.

Persons operating an ice cream parlor or soda fountain in connection with their public eating places must observe the restrictions on the amount of sugar to be used in such ice cream parlor or soda fountain as set out in order 54. The sugar allotted for this purpose is in conformity to that order. Sugar certificates for your use in making purchases of sugar after September 1 is enclosed herewith.

Vengeance and the Woman at the Veteran Theatre—Featuring William Duncan and Carol Holloway in 8th episode

Duncan lifts tree carrying six men in hand to hand battle with outlaws on the extreme peak of a wild mountain, which adds to the thrills to satisfy anybody in the eighth episode of Vengeance—and the Woman, which will be seen in the Veteran Theatre on Sat. September, 7th. William Duncan (Henry Blake) lifts the end of a pine tree over which half a dozen men are climbing and hurls it into a gorge, carrying the men to death. In the second, he grapples with two bandits as they emerge from the month of an old mine shaft, but by a super-human effort forces them back over the edge and they fall to the depths of the mine. These struggles are vividly pictured—just an added touch of realism to a smashing Episode, Carol Holloway (Bessie Blake) always the objective of the Outlaw leader.

While the new regulations governing the use of sugar may at first appear to create unnecessary inconvenience, it must be borne in mind that the restrictions would not be imposed unless they were absolutely necessary. Until the new order was promulgated, the allowance in Canada was seven pounds per person per month. Now it is to be reduced to two pounds. There is no shortage in the world's supply of sugar, the difficulty is one of transportation only. As the Toronto Globe points out in discussing the new regulation man should have a comparatively easy job. He isn't supposed to be strong on sweets and ices and toothsome delicacies which fascinate femininity. He ought to be able without much effort to sacrifice sugar in his tea and coffee, or at least to reduce the size of the lump he uses. Outside of the voracious fellow who piles quantities on his fruit and salads, and the pseudo Scot who eats sugar with his porridge, the men ought to be able to stand the proposed proportionate reduction with equanimity.

The problem is really one for the good women—particularly for efficient housewives. The making of cakes and jams, the preserving of fruit, the manufacture of sweet pickles, and the myriad accomplishments of the kitchen which call for the generous use of sugar will provide problems which must tax their ingenuity. Something has already been accomplished in cooking and baking by the substitution of syrup and honey. Perhaps the present necessity may prove to be the impetus to additional achievement in the creation and adoption of substitutes.

But whatever the cost, all loyal citizens will cheerfully pay it. Compared with the sacrifice and suffering of the peoples of our European allies, home-staying Canadians have been called upon to make very small contributions in self denial. If the cutting down of sugar consumption will help in any way to speed the winning of the war by relieving transportation facilities for essential war work, by all means let it be cut down. Canadians will gladly go over themselves accordingly.

"For Liberty at Veteran Sept. 6th.

An interesting and patriotic photoplay entitled "For Liberty" will be presented at the Veteran on Sept. 6th. It is a film of the stage play, "It is for England." The production of this film was only rendered possible by the facilities rendered by the Admiralty. Special permission being obtained from the British government to make the picture in England, and it is now owned exclusively by the Navy League of Canada.

The film discloses in an intensely dramatic manner the German system of espionage in England, and shows with vivid clearness how the authorities over there are coping with the situation. Scenes of our great navy in action, dreadnaughts, cruisers, destroyers, submarines, chasers and mine sweepers gives one a good idea of the magnitude and invincibility of our Naval forces.

A romantic story runs through out the action of the piece, making the film doubly interesting, and an enjoyable two hours' entertainment is provided all who witness the performance. Mr. J. A. Irvine of the Navy League is arranging for 10 or 15 of his cadets to render selections throughout the programme. All seats are reserved and popular prices will be charged, 25c., 35c. and 50c.
